Marc Widershien

from BREAKING THE NET

XXIV

so the prophet paced on this very ground and called it sacred then civilizations grew up behind him like a canker

the death of America

that he loved

into the faded blaze of those autumnal worlds search for signs that perhaps never were --under leaves under the soles

the chant
of the mockingbird
has no translation
--follow its presence
though it will soon leave you behind

but listen...

take note of that last song