The Mickle Street Review is an annual publication of the Walt Whitman Association, which maintains Whitman's home in Camden as a historic site. Address all correspondence to The Editors, The Mickle Street Review, 330 Mickle Street, Camden, NJ 08103. Manuscripts must be accompanied by a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Subscription orders may be directed to the same address. Make checks payable to the Walt Whitman Assoc./MSR. Subscriptions are $3.50 per year.

Special thanks are due the following writers and presses for permission to reprint previously published works: Dan Gerber, "A Fine Excess," from DEPARTURE (Sumac Press, 1973); Jack Lindeman, "Walt Whitman, My Contemporary," from AMERICAN DIALOG (Oct/Nov 1965); Robert G. Lowery, "What Whitman taught O'Casey," from THE DAILY WORLD 6/6/80; Judith Offer, "And Theirs to Remember Them," from THE FIRST APPLES (1977); Edith Segal, "An Unsent Letter," from TAKE MY HAND (1969); David R. Slavitt, "Two Stanzas from DOZENS," DOZENS (Louisiana State University Press, 1981). Thanks also to the William Andrews Clark Library for permission to quote from Whitman's letter to W. S. Kennedy, and for the Whitman manuscript which appears on our cover.
